It was a partially decomposed, perfectly free milling ore, and some of it was Bullionville, but to go over to Panaca absolutely encrusted with born silver. We learn that the streak or strata of ore from which this ore comes is about fourteen inches wide. The Washington and Creole was once the richest mine in the camp, and it looks now as though it would soon resume its former pre-eminence. No one deserves success more than the justly popular Superintendent, Martin Tarpey.
